We sincerely thank the 85 reviewers who contributed to the Journal of Health and Pollution (JH&P) over the last few years. Peer reviewers donate substantial time to ensure that articles published in JH&P are relevant, scientifically valid, ethically sound and as clearly and accurately described as possible. The efforts of peer reviewers contribute to the quality and integrity of articles published in JH&P. Our peer reviewers also help broaden understanding of the human health effects of environmental contamination in low- and middle-income countries (LMICs), and how to prevent and overcome these effects.

The majority of reviews have been timely, detailed and constructive. This also supports our secondary mission of encouraging research and publication capacity in LMICs—those countries most affected by environmental contamination.

JH&P welcomes submissions that explore all aspects of environmental contamination affecting human health in LMICs, but especially the cutting edge priorities of:

- exposure and disease relationships, especially mercury, cadmium and particulates,
- understanding the magnitude of global lead exposure,
- economic costs of pollution related disease,
- baseline exposure and health data in LMICs, and
- further identification of major sources of environmental contamination.

We also thank all authors who have submitted manuscripts to JH&P to date.

With gratitude,

Sandy Page-Cook, MPH
